Privacy policy and terms

Read both these documents carefully. By using any part of the website, you agree to these conditions of use.

Privacy Policy

Welcome to our Privacy Policy. This policy describes how, when, and why private data will be used by Janine Pardo (hereafter we or us) and what you can do to revoke your consent.

janinepardo.com collects your information in these ways:

- anonymously, when you visit any page. We use Google Analytics to look at, for example, how long you spend on a page, in order to inform us of ways the site can be improved. We don't use data like this to send you targeted ads. Note that the way that Google deals with your personal data might be different to the ways we detail in this Privacy Policy - for more information, look at <https://policies.google.com/privacy> or ask a solicitor.
- personally, when you explicitly give us your personal information to deal with an enquiry. We'll process this enquiry directly and it won't be passed on (unless we receive a request from the Police or other law enforcement services, and we'll try (but can't make any promises) to let you know if we ever receive such a request).

By using any part of this website, you agree to both this privacy policy and the terms and conditions. If you don't agree to the terms and conditions or this privacy policy, cease use of the website. Your personal data - when you gave it explicitly, such as in an enquiry - can be requested to be deleted by emailing privacy@janinepardo.com and letting us know what you'd like to be deleted. Note it might take up to 30 days for us to fully erase this data.

Terms and conditions

This website is available without any warranty, and we disclaim any remarks about its effectiveness, its security, or any other promises or otherwise about how well it works for you. You agree that you won't try to reverse engineer, decompile, or gain unauthorised access to the server, and if you spot an error or another mistake you think we should fix you'll contact us as soon as possible.
